

Social customs and their impact on development

Cultural deposits are not only hindering developmental projects, but also vary according to social circumstances and historical factors .As they vary depending on the change of location may be an incentive for the development of these projects in some countries, as happened in Japan , While blocking the completion of any of these projects in other countries.

Cultural deposits are classified into several categories

1. Beliefs
2. Patterns of thinking
3. Social customs
4. Health problems and common diseases

All these items are linked to social upbringing because of their importance in transmitting the cultural heritage of the new generation
